Capital Markets Commentary (as of May 31, 2021)

Capital Markets Overview

Global equity markets ended mostly higher in May as coronavirus infection rates continued to ease in most developed nations (with the notable exception of Japan). A spike in inflation weighed on consumer and investor sentiment in the U.S. although the Fed offered assurance it would prove temporary as supply shortages against renewed demand were driving the recent surge.

Domestic Equity Markets

The major indices were mixed in May. Value stocks resumed their early year dominance and outperformed their growth counterparts. Sector returns varied widely within the S&P 500 index with energy and materials gaining over 5%, while consumer discretionary fell nearly 4%. Overall, the S&P 500 gained 0.7% on the month.

International Equity Markets

International equities outperformed the U.S., especially in the eurozone. Developed international markets, as measured by the MSCI EAFE index, increased 3.6% for U.S. currency investors. The MSCI Europe index advanced 4.3%, the fourth consecutive month of gains for the index, as accelerating vaccine rollouts renewed optimism. Emerging Markets indices were broadly mixed with the MSCI Emerging Markets index posting a 1.2% return.

Fixed Income Markets

Bond markets were positive for a second straight month. The Bloomberg Barclays U.S. Aggregate Bond index gained 0.3% on the month. Riskier parts of the bond market gained with the Bloomberg Barclays High Yield index advancing 0.2%.

The Modified Target Benchmark date of first use was January 1, 2021.
