

Is your congregation ready to engage in missional thinking?
Do you need assistance in getting started?

Do you want to know the Bible better and to engage more deeply as a Christian community?

Welcome to
Story Matters: Naming, Claiming and Living
Our Biblical Identity

The basic idea is this:

The Bible is both God's story and our story.

But how does this work for us -- really?

...in ways that help to form us as disciples?

How can we claim our story (the old one and the one still happening)?

How can we live into our story (learn, practice and deepen our faith)?

How can we live "out of" our story -- out of the congregation into the world?

These questions can be fruitfully engaged by Story Matters, a free resource from the ELCA that invites congregations to participate in a simple two-step process that is flexible and easily adapted to individual congregations.

Story Matters will help you:

- Tell your own congregational stories through the Bible.
- Do mission planning in ways that are fun, engaging and biblically alive.
- Reimagine ways to practice the faith both as individuals and as a faith community.
- Address biblical illiteracy and show how a really old book can still make sense and apply to life today.
- Engage Scripture in ways that are fun and lets God into the conversation.
- Provide fellowship for the whole congregation.

A leader's guide to Story Matters is available at www.bookoffaith.org and on the Faith Practices page at www.elca.org. Supporting videos will also soon be available.
