Key Terms for understanding the timeline

ELCA social statements are teaching and policy documents that provide broad frameworks to assist in thinking about and discussing social issues in the context of faith and life. Social statements establish ELCA teaching and set policy for our church's social witness.

A Draft of a Social Statement is exactly that, a draft of a social statement designed for feedback from church members. It does not represent the official teaching of the ELCA but provide a working document from the task force to generate comment and suggestions from throughout the church.

Hearings are gatherings during the Draft Comment period in which participants share their thoughts, comments, and suggestions in a group setting. Comments and suggestions about themes and specific wording are recorded and shared with the task force.

Listening events are forums led by task force members or Process Builders* designed to hear from members of the ELCA regarding their insights and concerns around the issues of church, state, and civic participation. It provides early feedback for the task force about hopes, fears, and expectations for the social statement that the task force will develop. These events tend to be local or online in nature.

During the development process of a social statement, various study documents may be created to help members of the ELCA probe and think about issues under discussion. Most of these are brief, one-to-three session resources focusing on a specific topic. The task force also creates a "full study." The full study is written by the task force based on its investigations and provides a comprehensive resource of sustained themes and key topics. Each study document includes a response form that can be completed and sent to the task force by individuals or groups who have used this study.

An ELCA Task Force (approximately 15 to 17 individuals) is seated by action of Church Council, to carry out the development of a social statement. Members are nominated or apply and are selected to bring to the table a wide range of skill sets, competencies, backgrounds, and perspectives in accordance with ELCA diversity commitments.

*Process Builders (PBs) are ELCA volunteers trained to strengthen the participation in developing an ELCA social statement. Process Builders work together with staff on the Theological Discernment Team (Office of the Presiding Bishop) to build awareness, communication, conversation, and engagement during a social statement process.
